

Bee-lieving is seeing

Broomfield's Baseline community, the state's first Pollinator District, celebrates Honey Bee Day

Baseline in Broomfield / Courtesy photo

The plan is for Honey Bee Day to be an annual event in Broomfield, taking place on or near National Honey Bee Day, which is annually on the third Saturday in August.

Baseline in Broomfield / Courtesy photo

Beekeepers, beehives and bee experts were on hand Saturday.

Baseline in Broomfield / Courtesy photo

Broomfield's Baseline community, Colorado's first Pollinator District, hosted its inaugural Honey Bee Day on Saturday in Basin Park. Participants were able to learn about bees and beekeeping from the Brighton Bee Club.

Baseline in Broomfield / Courtesy photo

Among the activities on Saturday was face painting, including getting a bee painted on one's cheek.

Cher Preston of Preston's Moments / Courtesy photo

The inaugural Honey Bee Day in Broomfield even offered up the opportunity to dress up -- as a honey bee, of course -- for the occasion.

Cher Preston of Preston's Moments / Courtesy photo

Children in attendance had the opportunity to create upcycled crafts, including a mason bee house. Honey Bee Day was a collaboration between the Broomfield Council on the Arts & Humanity and Sustainable Broomfield.

Cher Preston of Preston's Moments / Courtesy photo

BlueGrass Blitz performed for those in attendance Saturday at Honey Bee Day.

